

At What Cost?

The Psychology of Institutional Blindness and the Price of Truth for the Truthteller

Edited by Ian Ross

Price $85.00

This groundbreaking book is an extraordinary compilation of real, courageously told human stories. Edited to bring lived experience to the forefront, each chapter features an individual who stood up to wrong conduct, flawed information management, and compromised decision-making within their industry.

Inside the book, you'll explore:

- The Psychological Drivers: The hidden mechanisms, groupthink, self-preservation, and systemic denial that drive institutions to corrupt their own integrity by attacking their own people.
- The Human Cost: The profound personal, professional, and psychological impact on victims who dare to expose the truth.
- The First-Hand Accounts: Real-world case studies detailing how truth-tellers were ignored, dismissed, or actively retaliated against by systems unable—or unwilling—to face reality.

A vital read for professionals, advocates, decision-makers, and anyone who has ever faced the wall of organisational silence.

CONTENTS: Contributory chapters

Aer Lingus and the Paper Trail of Pain: Surviving DARVO, Malicious Discipline and the Kangaroo Employment Court". Virginia Linehan

The Human Cost of Clarity. An Anatomy of Institutional Psychological Violence Against the Innocent. Dr. Chris Day

Whistleblowers and Shadows of Doubt: Re-evaluating the Case of Lucy Letby. Christopher Morris, Stephanie Davies

The Mass Contagion of Persecution. Redefining Masculinity in the Justice System. Halima Layeni

Consciousness in Crimes of the Conscienceless: A Tale of Moral Codes Down Immoral Roads. Pod Young